SENATE WOULD IMPEACH CHASE

Requests the House to Institute Proceedings.

ACCUSED IS FALL'S SON-IN-LAW

Chase Alleged to Have Participated in Conspiracy to Mislead the Senate Oil Committee as to the Source From Which Fall Obtained $100,000, Colorado Banker Questioned by Probers.

Washington, March 26.—Impeachment proceedings against C. C. Chase, collector of customs at El Paso, Tex., and son-in-law of Albert B. Fall, may be instituted by the house at the request of the senate.

Action is sought because of Chase's alleged participation in a conspiracy to mislead the senate oil committee as to the source from which Fall obtained the $100,000 later shown to have been obtained from E. L. Doheny and for refusal to testify to the committee.

A resolution instructing the house to undertake impeachment proceedings presented by Senator Walsh of Montana was quickly adopted by the senate.

Chase appeared before the committee Saturday and refused to answer questions on the ground that the answers might incriminate him. The vote on the resolution was unanimous.

Senator H. O. Bursum (Rep., N. M.) protested against the senate action, saying that Chase intended to resign. Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, replied that no resignation "will be permitted to protect an offending official."

Harry P. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, who refused to answer the committee's questions last Saturday, has been cited for contempt of the senate. The formal citation was referred to the district attorney for presentation to the federal grand jury immediately with the request that Sinclair be indicted.

The senate oil committee endeavored to trail to its source a mysterious $32,000 with which Fall purchased ranch properties in New Mexico after the Teapot Dome lease was negotiated.

The committee examined M. D. Thatcher, president of the First National bank of Pueblo, Col., and trustee of the Thatcher estate, with whom Fall had financial dealings. Thatcher said Fall had from time to time borrowed $102,000 from his concern, but could not account for the $32,000 with which Fall testified he had purchased properties after he invested the $100,000 he obtained from Doheny in another property.

"The testimony of Thatcher proves that Fall got $32,000 from some source not yet revealed to the committee," Senator Walsh declared following Thatcher's testimony.

Anderson H. Thackett, accountant for the federal trade commission, gave the committee a detailed account of the stock dealings of the late Jesse Smith.

Thackett said his examination of the books of Hibbs & Company, Washington brokers, indicated that Daugherty and Smith speculated jointly in Sinclair and other oil stocks, under the name of "W. W. Spaid." The account was closed out June 1, 1923, Thackett said.

NOW IN SING SING

William H. Anderson Declares He Is a Prisoner of War.

New York, March 26.—Declaring he was a "prisoner of war," William H. Anderson, former superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon league, arrived at Sing Sing prison to begin a sentence of from one to two years for forgery. About 50 persons stared at the former dry leader as he got off the train, guarded by two deputy sheriffs, each holding one of his coat sleeves. The three entered a taxicab and drove rapidly to the prison, where the chief clerk took Anderson's pedigree and assigned him No. 75,745. The new prisoner was then led to the bath and a prison uniform issued him, after which his cell was assigned. He will be forced to wield a pick and shovel for the first 10 days of his stay at Sing Sing. After that he is likely to be shifted to clerical work. Anderson declared he was innocent of the alleged crime of which a "wet jury" found him guilty.

SETTLES WITH STATE

Hamilton County Pays Balance Due on Old Account.

Columbus, March 26.—Hamilton county has just paid into the state treasury the balance on an overdue account for the care of its wards at the Columbus state hospital for feeble-minded. The balance was $116,000, and a voucher for that amount has just been received by the charities division of the state welfare department. The full amount due from Hamilton county, when the supreme court decided that the charge was a legal one, was $230,000. Soon after the court decision one-half the amount due was paid and the other half received this week. Several counties in the state withheld their payments for the care of feeble-minded until this test case of Hamilton county was carried through the courts, but since the decision have paid the amounts due.

TO STUDY QUESTION OF FUEL OIL FOR NAVY

Commission Is Appointed by President Coolidge.

Washington, March 26.—A commission has been appointed by President Coolidge to make a study of the question of fuel oil for the navy and the conservation of oil in the future for the use of national defense.

Dr. George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey; Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president of the general navy board, and R. D. Bush of the California bureau of meteorology were named members of the commission.

District Attorney Gordon requested special government counsel in the oil cases to co-operate with him in Harry F. Sinclair's contempt case and later he conferred with them and Chairman Ladd and Senator Walsh at the capitol.

Open hearings by the special senate committee to investigate charges made against "two congressmen" by the Chicago grand jury that indicted Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau, will begin April 2, Chairman Burton announced. The committee set this date because of the expectation that the special grand jury here also taking evidence in the case will have acted by March 31.

LIQUOR SOLD TO BOYS

Evidence of Bootleg Ring Discovered by Toledo Judge.

Toledo, March 26.—Judge O'Donnell of juvenile court announced he had discovered evidence of a ring of bootleggers, who have been specializing in the sale of liquor to school boys. The existence of the ring was discovered through the judge's investigation of the Harbor View "petting parties," indulged in by nearly 50 boys and girls still in their teens. The judge has been gathering evidence against the members of the bootleg group for several weeks, he announced. Judge O'Donnell's evidence will be placed before Federal Judge Killits within the next few days.

REPORTS FILED BY EXAMINERS

Illegal Practices in Law Enforcement Alleged.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS ACCUSED

Reports Charge Commercialized Law Enforcement and Irregularities in Liquor Law Courts of Mayors and Justices of the Peace—Findings Made Against Officials by the State Examiners.

Columbus, March 26.—Reports of state examiners filed with State Auditor Tracy disclosed new evidence of "commercialized law enforcement" and irregularities in liquor law courts of mayors and justices of the peace.

Audits of records of justices of the peace in Summit and Trumbull counties and mayors of Jefferson county villages, according to the examiners' reports, disclosed alleged irregularities of all kinds, including illegal and excessive fees, suspension of fines in order to collect magistrate's costs, and missing records of costs.

Former Justice of the Peace A. D. Mattison of Warren, Trumbull county, now in Miami, Fla., is charged by the examiners with carefully collecting costs which would accrue to his personal benefit and neglecting to collect fines that would benefit the public treasury. Mattison heard 900 cases in a year, the report said.

Findings are made against L. E. Van Buskirk and H. V. Johnson, Summit county justices. Mark H. Shank, justice at Kenmore, is charged with illegally suspending fines. Against Jefferson county village officials findings totaling $61,988 are made. Among those against whom findings were made are Mayor William J. McCann of New Alexandria, Mayor F. E. McCullough of Richmond and Mayor J. A. Barger of Smithfield.

Some of the justices of the peace in Summit county were enforcing the Crabbe prohibition act and assessing fines for violation of it several months before the law became effective, according to report made by Examiner M. L. Campbell, Jr., covering an audit of justices' records in the county.

Sleuths working under Mayor McCann of New Alexandria were paid $3,383 in illegal fees, plus an additional $644 illegally paid them as "assistant fees," the report claims. McCann's court collected $54,777 in Crabbe act fines in less than three years, "detectives" receiving $13,300 of this as their "percentage," it was disclosed. Barger collected $31,288 in liquor law fines in less than two years in his court.

At Grover, Jefferson county, according to the report, attorneys were being paid 40 per cent of liquor fines and their share was deducted from the fines collected before the state was paid its legal 50 per cent, with the result that the state was getting only 30 per cent of the fines as compared to 40 per cent to the lawyers.

FINK RETURNS HOME

Alleges He Was Offered Permit to Operate Liquor Warehouse.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 26.—Alexander L. Fink, back from Washington, revealed what he termed his actual relations with Miss Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of the late Jesse Smith, friend of Attorney General Daugherty. He says he has placed a sworn affidavit in the hands of the Wheeler committee to the effect that after the Cleveland hotel episode he was offered a permit to operate a liquor warehouse in Pittsburgh if he would keep quiet. "I expect to prove," Fink said, referring to a copy of the affidavit, "at no time did I enter into any conspiracy or blackmailing scheme against Harry M. Daugherty, the attorney general."

Time Ruling Modified.

Columbus, March 26.—The interstate commerce commission modified its recent ruling setting new boundaries between eastern and central time zones, so as to except the Ohio Central lines of the New York Central railroad and to include its lines from Toledo to Columbus and from Peoria to St. Marys, O., in the eastern standard time zone, instead of the central time zone.

Criticizes Coolidge.

Washington, March 26.—President Coolidge was assailed by Representative Oliver (Dem., N. Y.) for not forcing an investigation of his own into the estate of Jesse Smith, friend of Attorney General Daugherty, to determine where Smith's money came from. Mr. Oliver said the president has refused to help the senate committee and "is acting like a sleepy judge." "Shall Harry Daugherty be allowed by the president to conceal the evidence that all America demands?" Oliver asked.

MELLON URGES INVESTIGATION

Never Interfered With Revenue Bureau, He Declares.

MAILS LETTER TO COMMITTEE

Secretary Offers Probers Full Information on Tax Matters of Companies in Which He Is Personally Interested—Asks Immediate Inquiry So That Any Misapprehension May Be Dispelled.

Washington, March 26.—An investigation of all tax transactions between corporations in which he is interested and the internal revenue bureau has been demanded by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

In a letter to the senate committee investigating the bureau, Mellon asked that the inquiry begin at once so that any misapprehension in the public mind may be cleared up.

The secretary denied that he had ever interfered with the bureau of internal revenue in any way in any tax matter. He offered the committee full information on tax matters of companies in which he is personally interested, adding that in fairness to himself and to the companies, the committee could make an immediate investigation. Mr. Mellon in his statement said:

"In the hearing before your committee what purported to be a copy of a memorandum delivered by an ex-employee to a member of your committee was introduced and has been made the basis for headlines in the newspapers, which might lead the public to believe I had sought to influence the bureau of internal revenue in its consideration of the tax liability of certain companies in which I am interested as stockholder. As I have already stated, I have never interfered in any way with the bureau of internal revenue in any tax matter. Last of all would I do so in cases in which it might be charged that I was personally concerned. I feel, however, that it is due to me, and to the companies involved that the committee make an immediate investigation in order that you may thoroughly satisfy yourself and the public whether or not these companies have received any favor from the government.

"Three companies which have been mentioned are the Gulf Refining company and its subsidiaries, the Standard Steel Car company and the Aluminum company of America. Each of these companies has advised the commissioner of internal revenue that it waives its right to privacy under the statute, and the commissioner is authorized to produce to your committee, without restriction of any kind, all of the tax returns and accompanying papers for each tax year."

AMERICA DECLINES

Will Not Make Race Out of Attempt to Fly Around World.

Washington, March 26.—A challenge by the British to make a race out of the American and British attempts to fly around the globe has been declined by the war department. The offer was rejected by the army air service on the ground that this country's flyers are undertaking a real effort to fly around the world without any regard to speed, and can not risk a failure by making a race out of it. The American flyers are now at Seattle, Wash., preparing to hop across the Pacific by way of Alaska on April 1. They expect to be gone until September. The British airmen hope to be home June 28.

SEIZE $150,000

Bandits Perpetrate Daring Robbery in Suburb of Chicago.

Chicago, March 26.—Four bandits seized and escaped with $150,000 in cash contained in two registered mail sacks at Harvey, a suburb. The money was currency consisting of $1, $5 and $10 bills, and it was shipped from the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago to the First National Bank of Harvey. The two registered mail sacks and two ordinary sacks of mail were seized from William Russell, 60, as he was unloading them for delivery in front of the bank here. Russell was thrown to one side as the bandits, guns in hand, threw the mail sacks into an automobile and sped away.

Hotel Burned.

Ravenna, O., March 26.—Fire destroyed the Thomas Shea hotel at Suffield, Portage county. Loss $20,000.

BRITISH FLIERS OFF

London, March 26.—Commander Stuart MacLaren took off from Calshot in an airplane flight around the world. He was accompanied in the plane by Flying Officer Plenderleith and Sergeant Andrews, the former a pilot, the latter a mechanic. They will make the world flight attempt with him. Only one plane is participating in the British project.

MacLaren plans making the entire trip in about 293 flying hours. He expects to reach Karachi, India, April 7; Tokyo April 28, Vancouver May 27, Ottawa June 5 and be back in London June 28. "We hope to make an average of 300 to 500 miles a day," Commander MacLaren said.

MacLaren is using a special amphibian machine, with a landing carage which, during the flight, will be drawn up above the keel. The combination land and water machine will permit many descents which otherwise would be impossible, the airmen believe.

State to Make Bid.

Columbus, March 26.—The manufacturing division of the state welfare department will submit bids for the furniture and fixtures to be used in the new Central high school in this city, J. E. Clark, manager of sales and manufacturing, said. This contract is one of the largest sought for any public school in Ohio in several years. If the state is successful, the work will be turned out at the Mansfield reformatory.

Constable Shot.

Niagara, N. Y., March 26.—Constable Gilbert Carter was shot down while patrolling the banks of the Niagara river by men believed to be alien smugglers. The constable, who was taken to a hospital here, said he came upon the men who were lying in wait for a boat load of aliens being brought across the river from Canada.

TIME NOT PROPITIOUS

Coolidge Not to Call Conference to Limit Armament.

Washington, March 26.—It was stated at the white house that President Coolidge has no intention of complying with the request congress inserted in the navy bill that a new international conference be called to limit armament. Conditions in Europe are such, in the president's belief, as to make such a conference "hopeless at the outset." This government, however, stands willing to initiate such a conference when the time is "propitious," the president holds.

Five Suspects Held.

Columbus, March 26.—Police are holding five men in their investigation of the murder of Morris Davis, 29, killed in a bootleggers' war. Davis was killed while in his automobile. The suspects are Harry Stein, 31; William Kimmelman, 20; Charles Solomon, Frank Strang and Charles W. Ginn. Davis was shot to death.

SENATE WOULD IMPEACH CHASE

Requests the House to Institute Proceedings.

ACCUSED IS FALL'S SON-IN-LAW

Chase Alleged to Have Participated in Conspiracy to Mislead the Senate Oil Committee as to the Source From Which Fall Obtained $100,000. Colorado Banker Questioned by Probers.

Washington, March 26.—Impeachment proceedings against C. C. Chase, collector of customs at El Paso, Tex., and son-in-law of Albert B. Fall, may be instituted by the house at the request of the senate.

Action is sought because of Chase's alleged participation in a conspiracy to mislead the senate oil committee as to the source from which Fall obtained the $100,000 later shown to have been obtained from E. L. Doheny and for refusal to testify to the committee.

A resolution instructing the house to undertake impeachment proceedings presented by Senator Walsh of Montana was quickly adopted by the senate.

Chase appeared before the committee Saturday and refused to answer questions on the ground that the answers might incriminate him. The vote on the resolution was unanimous.

Senator H. O. Bursum (Rep., N. M.) protested against the senate action, saying that Chase intended to resign. Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, replied that no resignation "will be permitted to protect an offending officeholder."

Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of Teapot Dome, who refused to answer the committee's questions last Saturday, has been cited for contempt of the senate. The formal citation was referred to the district attorney for presentation to the federal grand jury immediately with the request that Sinclair be indicted.

The senate oil committee endeavored to trail to its source a mysterious $32,000 with which Fall purchased ranch properties in New Mexico after the Teapot Dome lease was negotiated.

The committee examined M. D. Thatcher, president of the First National bank of Pueblo, Col., and trustee of the Thatcher estate, with whom Fall had financial dealings. Thatcher said Fall had from time to time borrowed $102,000 from his concern, but could not account for the $32,000 with which Fall testified he had purchased properties after he invested the $100,000 he obtained from Doheny in another property.

"The testimony of Thatcher proves that Fall got $32,000 from some source not yet revealed to the committee," Senator Walsh declared following Thatcher's testimony.

Anderson H. Thackett, accountant for the federal trade commission, gave the committee a detailed account of the stock dealings of the late Jesse Smith.

Thackett said his examination of the books of Hibbs & Company, Washington brokers, indicated that Daugherty and Smith speculated jointly in Sinclair and other oil stocks, under the name of "W. W. Spaid." The account was closed out June 1, 1923, Thackett said.

Reports Charge Commercialized Law Enforcement and Irregularities in Liquor Law Courts of Mayors and Justices of the Peace—Findings Made Against Officials by the State Examiners.

Columbus, March 26.—Reports of state examiners filed with State Auditor Tracy disclosed new evidence of "commercialized law enforcement" and irregularities in liquor law courts of mayors and justices of the peace.

Audits of records of justices of the peace in Summit and Trumbull counties and mayors of Jefferson county villages, according to the examiners' reports, disclosed alleged irregularities of all kinds, including illegal and excessive fees, suspension of fines in order to collect magistrate's costs, and missing records of costs.

Former Justice of the Peace A. D. Mattison heard 900 cases in a year, the report said.

At Grover, Jefferson county, according to the report, attorneys were being paid 40 per cent of liquor fines and their share was deducted from the fines collected before the state was paid its legal 50 per cent, with the result that the state was getting only 30 per cent of the fines as compared to 40 per cent to the lawyers.

Woman Charged With Robbery.

Cleveland, March 26.—Mrs. Agnes Battles, 23, confessed to the robbery of the Ohio Savings and Loan company of Fostoria, O., Dec. 8, 1923, after identification by Carl Smith, secretary of the bank, police announced. Mrs. Battles is held in the county jail, charged with the robbery of the St. Clair Jewelry and Music company, last week. Her bond had been fixed at $20,000. According to Smith, she attempted to rob him in the bank Nov. 23, but was frightened away. She returned Dec. 8 and forced two women clerks to turn over $1,200 at the point of a revolver, he said.

Nine Men In Death Row.

Columbus, March 26.—The population of death row at the Ohio penitentiary was increased to nine men when Bucur Tudor, Cleveland, was admitted to the institution. Tudor was received from Cleveland, where he shot his wife to death and was sentenced to die in the electric chair July 2. The prisoner was placed in the same cell with Vincenzo Caparra, Jefferson county, who has been sentenced to die June 24.

Chiropractors' Conviction Affirmed.

Cincinnati, March 26.—The municipal court conviction of seven chiropractors, who were charged with advertising themselves to practice medicine without having obtained state licenses, was affirmed by Judge Thomas H. Darby in common pleas court. Attorneys for the defendants said they would take the case to the court of appeals.

Dairymen Fined.

Springfield, O., March 26.—Police Judge Lewis L. Miller fined Frank J. Cory, local dairymen, on the latter's plea of guilty to adulterating milk he furnished to the Ohio Pythian home here. Judge Miller fined Cory $150 and costs.

Child Crushed to Death.

Dayton, O., March 26.—Donald Keller, 4, was crushed to death under a gravel truck. The child was riding on a tricycle, lost control of it and coasted down an embankment, directly in front of the truck.

Infant's Body Found.

Still Seized.

Zanesville, O., March 26.—A man, giving his name as Richard Payne of Columbus, was held here by police following his arrest and the seizure of a still in a home he is said to have been occupying here.

Mule's Kick Blamed.

Uhrichsville, O., March 26.—The relatives of Roger H. Johnson, 28, blame the kick of a mule as the cause of Johnson's death here. Johnson was kicked during the world war.

Criticizes Coolidge.

Washington, March 26.—President Coolidge was assailed by Representative Oliver (Dem., N. Y.) for not forcing an investigation of his own into the estate of Jesse Smith, friend of Attorney General Daugherty, to determine where Smith's money came from. Mr. Oliver said the president has refused to help the senate committee and "is acting like a sleepy judge." "Shall Harry Daugherty be allowed by the president to conceal the evidence that all America demands?" Oliver asked.

MELLON URGES INVESTIGATION

Never Interfered With Revenue Bureau, He Declares.

MAILS LETTER TO COMMITTEE

Secretary Offers Probers Full Information on Tax Matters of Companies in Which He is Personally Interested—Asks Immediate Inquiry So That Any Misapprehension May Be Dispelled.

Washington, March 26.—An investigation of all tax transactions between corporations in which he is interested and the internal revenue bureau has been demanded by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

In a letter to the senate committee investigating the bureau, Mellon asked that the inquiry begin at once so that any misapprehension in the public mind may be cleared up.

The secretary denied that he had ever interfered with the bureau of internal revenue in any way in any tax matter. He offered the committee full information on tax matters of companies in which he is personally interested, adding that in fairness to himself and to the companies, the committee could make an immediate investigation. Mr. Mellon in his statement said:

"In the hearing before your committee what purported to be a copy of a memorandum delivered by an ex-employee to a member of your committee was introduced and has been made the basis for headlines in the newspapers, which might lead the public to believe I had sought to influence the bureau of internal revenue in its consideration of the tax liability of certain companies in which I am interested as stockholder. As I have already stated, I have never interfered in any way with the bureau of internal revenue in any tax matter. Last of all would I do so in cases in which it might be charged that I was personally concerned. I feel, however, that it is due to me, and to the companies involved that the committee make an immediate investigation in order that you may thoroughly satisfy yourself and the public whether or not these companies have received any favor from the government.

"Three companies which have been mentioned are the Gulf Refining company and its subsidiaries, the Standard Steel Car company and the Aluminum company of America. Each of these companies has advised the commissioner of internal revenue that it waives its right to privacy under the statute, and the commissioner is authorized to produce to your committee, without restriction of any kind, all of the tax returns and accompanying papers for each tax year."

AMERICA DECLINES

Will Not Make Race Out of Attempt to Fly Around World.

Washington, March 26.—A challenge by the British to make a race out of the American and British attempts to fly around the globe has been declined by the war department. The offer was rejected by the army air service on the ground that this country's flyers are undertaking a real effort to fly around the world without any regard to speed, and can not risk a failure by making a race out of it. The American flyers are now at Seattle, Wash., preparing to hop across the Pacific by way of Alaska on April 1. They expect to be gone until September. The British airmen hope to be home June 28.

SEIZE $150,000

Bandits Perpetrate Daring Robbery in Suburb of Chicago.

Chicago, March 26.—Four bandits seized and escaped with $150,000 in cash contained in two registered mail sacks at Harvey, a suburb. The money was currency consisting of $1, $5 and $10 bills, and it was shipped from the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago to the First National Bank of Harvey. The two registered mail sacks and two ordinary sacks of mail were seized from William Russell, 60, as he was unloading them for delivery in front of the bank here. Russell was thrown to one side as the bandits, guns in hand, threw the mail sacks into an automobile and sped away.

Hotel Burned.

Ravenna, O., March 26.—Fire destroyed the Thomas Shea hotel at Suffield, Portage county. Loss $20,000.

BRITISH FLIERS OFF

London, March 26.—Commander Stuart MacLaren took off from Calshot in an airplane flight around the world. He was accompanied in the plane by Flying Officer Penderleith and Sergeant Andrews, the former a pilot, the latter a mechanic. They will make the world flight attempt with him. Only one plane is participating in the British project.

MacLaren plans making the entire trip in about 293 flying hours. He expects to reach Karachi, India, April 7; Tokyo April 28, Vancouver May 27, Ottawa June 5 and be back in London June 28. "We hope to make an average of 300 to 500 miles a day," Commander MacLaren said.

MacLaren is using a special Amphibian machine, with a landing carriage which, during the flight, will be drawn up above the keel. The combination land and water machine will permit many descents which otherwise would be impossible, the airmen believe.

State to Make Bid.

Columbus, March 26.—The manufacturing division of the state welfare department will submit bids for the furniture and fixtures to be used in the new Central high school in this city, J. E. Clark, manager of sales and manufacturing, said. This contract is one of the largest sought for any public school in Ohio in several years. If the state is successful, the work will be turned out at the Mansfield reformatory.

Constable Shot.

Niagara, N. Y., March 26.—Constable Gilbert Carter was shot down while patrolling the banks of the Niagara river by men believed to be alien smugglers. The constable, who was taken to a hospital here, said he came upon the men who were lying in wait for a boat load of aliens being brought across the river from Canada.

TIME NOT PROPITIOUS

Coolidge Not to Call Conference to Limit Armament.

Washington, March 26.—It was stated at the white house that President Coolidge has no intention of complying with the request congress inserted in the navy bill that a new international conference be called to limit armament. Conditions in Europe are such, in the president's belief, as to make such a conference "hopeless at the outset." This government, however, stands willing to initiate such a conference when the time is "propitious," the president holds.

Five Suspects Held.

Columbus, March 26.—Police are holding five men in their investigation of the murder of Morris Davis, 29, killed in a bootleggers' war. Davis was killed while in his automobile. The suspects are Harry Stein, 31; William Kimmelman, 20; Charles Solomon, Frank Strang and Charles W. Ginn. Davis was shot to death.

BARRERE & NICKERSON

INDIANS BRIGHT BUT OBSTINATE PUPILS

Teachers Let Them Answer Own Moods.

Clinton, Okla.—There is no power under the sun that can make a Cheyenne Indian child do what it has set its head not to do. This peculiar fact is made known by teachers in the Clinton public school who have Cheyenne children enrolled.

If, on the other hand, the Indian child takes the other tack and finds the suggested task agreeable, he becomes a docile, obedient and pleasant child, and makes progress in most subjects as rapidly as do white children.

Recently two Indian girls of the upper grades of common school were on the program to sing during an afternoon's recital. When their turn came they advanced to the rostrum and stood stark and stoically quiet and still for two minutes. Then they grew nervous and began to twist their feet and grin.

Subject of Wagers. "They're going to sing," whispered one of the teachers in the rear, who hadn't dared command them to sing. To have commanded would have assured a nonsinging stunt. Another teacher who had wagered the spirit wouldn't move then this day whispered she guessed she'd have to pay the wager. The girls sang, and sang creditably.

Silas Whiteshield, eleven years old, who is enrolled in the third grade, was asked by his teacher one day during a play hour to accompany Sarah Heap o' Birds, ten years old, to her seat. White boys were accompanying white girls to their seats. It was the order of the day. There was nothing unusual about it. Silas declined. When told a second time to obey he positively refused. The teacher ordered him to the cloakroom. Thirty minutes later she went out to gauge the progress of his reformation. No gauge was needed. Silas was a full-blood Cheyenne Indian in a war mood. He returned to his seat and sat there the rest of the day, unmindful of books or lessons, and also unpunished and apparently unnoticed by the teacher, a wisp of a young woman who had no inclination to go into open battle with a belligerent redskin.

Forgot His Rage. The next day Silas seemed to have forgotten his rage and was pleasant and obedient. He was more than that. To prove his respect for the teacher he whispered, when he had an opportunity, "Dan Redbird, he fool you. He no sick. He lay out o' school. You get 'im."

In dancing, singing, penmanship and some domestic arts these Indians make fair progress. Some of them become good penmen in a few weeks. But they are slow to grasp English and history. Some of them are children of graduates of Carlisle and of parents who speak several languages, but who have returned to the haunts and garbs of their forebears and have neglected to teach their children more than their native tongue.

Ventriloquism Enables Negro to Escape Police

Washington.—An unarmed negro with a gift of ventriloquism, a supply of whisky and a taxicab for purposes of retreat proved too much for the Washington police.

A watchman found him in the basement of a drug store, and a squad of police who tried to capture him retired under a fusillade of half-pint bottles of prescription liquor, intermingled with a rain of threats that seemed to come from several throats in various parts of the cellar. Tear bombs were ordered, but some of them exploded prematurely at headquarters.

Finally captured, the negro jumped from a patrol wagon, scaled a high wall and got away.

Plan London to Bombay 100-Hour Air Route

New York.—Maj. Gen. Sir William Sefton Brance, K. C. B., director of civil aviation of the British air ministry, says he is confident that the air route to India which has been planned by expert aviators is quite practicable, and he hopes in the near future to see airships make the trip from London to Bombay in 100 hours.

"I am confident of its success," Sir William continues. "At the present time it takes seventeen days by the quickest route—rail through Europe and steamer through the Suez canal. The proposed air route passes over Mesopotamia to Bagdad and from there to Bombay direct. If the United States also attempts a direct route to India, I predict that no more than 100 hours will be required for the flight from New York to Calcutta."

No Really White Silk.
There is no such thing as pure white silk. There are three colors of so-called white silk, oyster, which is sometimes called pure white, though it has a slight blue tinge; ivory, which has a tinge of pale yellow, and cream, in which the yellow tone can be plainly seen.

Absolute Proof.
There is one infallible method by which a man's greatness may be judged. If your friend sits mum for half an hour, listening to you discuss your favorite topic, then you know beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is a broad-minded as well as a brilliant conversationalist.

Sleeveless Suit Made of Gray, Black Flannel

This smart sleeveless suit, a harbinger of spring, is developed in flannel in grays and black.

Side Drapery in Spring
Fashions Shown in Paris

Though draped frocks have taken second place after the straight lines, they are by no means out of the running, and new spring models hint that there will be drapes on many of the smartest gowns coming from the large Paris dressmakers.

The new drapery is nothing more nor less than a break in the waistline, where the skirt is caught up a bit over one hip. It is rare that a bodice is ever anything but plain, flat and loose, with no suggestions whatever of drapery.

One maker is showing some closely draped skirts with long, loosely-fitting bodices, a drape that is disposed with great art and originality. He uses it on the crepes embroidered in crystal and all the lovely lames. One of his loveliest models is in tissue embroidered in jet and lined with black satin. The drape is very complicated, for it forms a little cape starting from the left shoulder and held in front by a motif of strass and jet.

There are also some fanciful drapes, curves and ties which are knotted down the back and often come in two colors. All are light and give the impression they are put together to float and give grace to angular movements.

New Fashions That Are Sure to Interest Women

The Chinese influence is stronger than ever in New York. It brings a renaissance of lacquer red, which is being extensively used for over-blouses.

The latest cloche has no brim at all. It fits closely down over the head and ears, but at one side it has an ornament of little curled feathers or of stiff ribbon cocked at a perky angle.

Frosted crystal pendants, watch fobs and cigarette holders are in vogue at present. There are also bracelets of frosted crystal, little finger rings and ear pendants.

Beltless Frock Is One of Fashion's Favorites

Thus far the beltless frock is more than holds its own, and it is shown in a number of different interpretations, among them one and two-piece effects.

Probably the most striking exponent of the beltless frock is seen in a long Chinese tunic made of white canton crepe embroidered in the same tone. This is worn over a black satin and comes to within five inches of the bottom of the skirt.

To complete the costume there is a long loose coat, also of black satin, cut on Chinese lines and edged around the small upstanding collar and down the front with ermine.

Tunic Blouses Are Knitted

A new tunic blouse that reaches to the knees is made of blue and white silk knitted to form a most attractive pattern.

From Rose to Rose
A member of a diplomatic corps tells a story of a Persian who came to this country on a special mission. Among those who entertained him was a wealthy man who invited the Oriental to his country house. The morning of the guest's arrival the host visited him in his apartment, and was astonished to see him hopping about the floor in the strangest way imaginable. The host ventured to ask the reason for this curious action. The Persian replied: "You see, this carpet is green with pink roses here and there. Green is a sacred color with us, so I am obliged to hop from rose to rose. It is good exercise, but rather fatiguing."—London Opinion.

New Musical Instrument
A new musical instrument recently invented is a double piano that can be played by one person. The instrument has two keyboards, one above the other, and the upper keyboard is an octave higher than the lower. This new piano is tuned as a whole and controlled by a single player. Another feature is that by pressing a lever the piano can be turned into a harpsichord, that is, instead of the keys being hammered, they are plucked.

Clavilux Plays for Eye
The clavilux is an organ-like instrument that plays light on a screen for the eye, just as music is played into the air for the ear. The instrument blends the qualities of color and of light—now rising and falling in soft gradation, now marshaled in full, impressive splendor, now fading into abrupt darkness. Sonatas of light and symphonies of color are thus made possible.

Left-Handed Golfers
The American Golfer says that there has been no great left-handed player. The percentage of left-handed players is very small. Some few left-handers are very good players, but many are below the average. One reason advanced for this is that about 50 per cent of those playing with left-handed clubs are really right handed, and should be playing that way.

No Really White Silk.
There is no such thing as pure white silk. There are three colors of so-called white silk, oyster, which is sometimes called pure white, though it has a slight blue tinge; ivory, which has a tinge of pale yellow, and cream, in which the yellow tone can be plainly seen.

Absolute Proof.
There is one infallible method by which a man's greatness may be judged. If your friend sits mum for half an hour, listening to you discuss your favorite topic, then you know beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is a broad-minded as well as a brilliant conversationalist.

Sleeveless Suit Made of Gray, Black Flannel

This smart sleeveless suit, a harbinger of spring, is developed in flannel in grays and black.

Side Drapery in Spring Fashions Shown in Paris

Though draped frocks have taken second place after the straight lines, they are by no means out of the running, and new spring models hint that there will be drapes on many of the smartest gowns coming from the large Paris dressmakers.

The new drapery is nothing more nor less than a break in the waistline, where the skirt is caught up a bit over one hip. It is rare that a bodice is ever anything but plain, flat and loose, with no suggestions whatever of drapery.

One maker is showing some closely draped skirts with long, loosely-fitting bodices, a drape that is disposed with great art and originality. He uses it on the crepes embroidered in crystal and all the lovely laces. One of his loveliest models is in tissue embroidered in jet and lined with black satin. The drape is very complicated, for it forms a little cape starting from the left shoulder and held in front by a motif of strass and jet.

There are also some fanciful drapes, curves and ties which are knotted down the back and often come in two colors. All are light and give the impression they are put together to float and give grace to angular movements.

New Fashions That Are Sure to Interest Women

The Chinese influence is stronger than ever in New York. It brings a renaissance of lacquer red, which is being extensively used for over-blouses.

The latest cloche has no brim at all. It fits closely down over the head and ears, but at one side it has an ornament of little curled feathers or of stiff ribbon cocked at a perky angle.

Frosted crystal pendants, watch fobs and cigarette holders are in vogue at present. There are also bracelets of frosted crystal, little finger rings and ear pendants.

Beltless Frock Is One of Fashion's Favorites

Thus far the beltless frock more than holds its own, and it is shown in a number of different interpretations, among them one and two-piece effects.

Workmen in City Building.

In tearing away the old ceiling of first floor of the city building which is now being remodeled by Charles Cook & Son preparatory to building offices for city officers, a coffin was discovered buried between the joists. The coffin was used by the Sons of Malta, an organization which used the second and third floor back in the sixties.

It was used in ritualistic work and was also carried at the head of the procession when members of that organization sallied forth in parades on the streets of the city. These processions use to strike terror in the hearts of the "kids" when the organization ventured forth at night, and they would all scamper home when the members in their black shrouds and winding clothes marched in parade.

The coffin is six feet long and is made of popular, stained a walnut color and lined with white cloth. The case is of the old style shape with bulged sides, tapering toward the head and foot. The casket is in good repair. The Sons of Malta was an organization on the order of the Brownies and the Owls and had quite a membership in its day.

SERIOUS INJURY.

Miller Fissell, a cadet at the Germantown Military academy, met with a very serious and painful accident Saturday. A 37 millimeter gun burst and his eyes were filled with powder and fire causing blindness. He came home Tuesday and is gradually recovering his sight. Three other cadets were injured by the explosion and they are yet in the hospital.

Oldest British Custom

Revived During the War

When the war flung the world into confusion it laid its hand on the oldest custom in the British Isles, a most curious practice that had come from the far-off time of the Druids and had flourished from then without a break until the year 1915. In Burghhead, a little fishing place on the Moray firth, this custom had been practiced from the very dawn of human society. It is the strange ritual of the burning of the clavie.

The clavie is made of a half barrel roughly put together and attached to a long pole by which it is carried. A stone is used to hammer in the wooden pegs that serve for nails, for it is considered as unlawful to allow iron to touch the wood. Old tales tell how a wicker basket with a fish inside used to be burned. Perhaps when the first Druid lighted the first clavie the sacrifice was something greater than a fish. Within more recent times neither basket nor fish appears, but the clavie is filled with chips of wood and shavings plentifully sprinkled with tar. The whole mass is set on fire by means of burning peat.

With an effluvia over his shoulder, the clavie bearer lifts his burning burden on his back and sets off to the site of a Roman camp, rocky promontory that thrusts itself out into the sea. Here a stone pedestal has been erected to hold the fire.

In this strange ritual Druidical and Christian customs are strangely interwoven. The lighting with peat was pagan and harks back to the sacrificial fires of Baal. The circling of the village sunward is from the same source. To the Druids the sun was an immediate object of worship. The use of wooden pegs rather than of iron nails and the use of a stone instead of a hammer are Christian, for the early Christian would not use the iron with which our Lord was nailed to the cross.

Why the custom lingered in quaint little Burghhead we cannot tell. In 1915 the admiralty forbade the showing of all lights seaward and the clavie was left unkindled. In 1919, however, this sole British survival of the worship of fire, the first of all religions and rituals, was rekindled.

Don't Cultivate Harsh Voice

The nearest human object is the most interesting fact of a child's existence, and naturally is the first model, every detail of which is eagerly watched and copied.

It often requires the expenditure of much effort in after life to correct the unpleasant habits of voices and the facial contortions, careless diction and impediments of speech such as lisping and stammering, which are acquired from mothers or nurses during the time when every small muscle of a child's face, vocal apparatus and body were forming their very first habits.

Nothing that a mother can provide for her child's future is more important than the practice of controlling her own voice in the presence of the child, when necessary, and of distinct articulation, and of a reasonable amount of control of her facial expression. When she controls these, control of her moods will take care of itself.

From Pumice Island

Pumice Island, near Salton sea, five miles northwest of Calpatria, in southern California, contributes thirty carloads of pumice to the commerce of the world each year. Pumice Island was once an island in Salton sea, but now, three miles inland, it is entirely surrounded by dry land. However, it retains its old name on local maps. Only a few years ago it was nothing more than a volcanic peak, rising above the waters of the inland sea, but the waters have been receding so rapidly that it now stands three miles back from the shore.

Mocking Bird

A doctor and his Irish coachman were driving past a duck pond when the coachman said: "Oi hate thim birds, sorr."

"Why should you hate the poor creatures, Pat?" asked the doctor. "I'm sure they never do you any harm."

"Sure, sorr, don't you hear thim mocking you? You niver pass thim but they call 'quack, quack, quack'!"

One on the Boss

"What does this mean, sir?" said the boss to the man coming in a half-hour late.

"It was on account of the awful fog this morning, sir," the fellow explained.

"Fog, fog?" expostulated the boss. "Why, what has the fog to do with it? You do not live across the bay?"

"No, sir. I know I don't; but you do, and I thought you would be late."

Just What He Wanted

"Well," suggested the exhausted clerk, "why don't you hide behind a chair and yell 'Boo!' at him?"

And He Said ??-!-!!

Lady (calling the electric light plant)—The lights in my house have all gone out.

Superintendent—Yes, madam. A parrot got caught in the dynamo.

Lady—Oh, how shocking!

Superintendent—You'd have thought so if you'd heard what he said.

Coffin Used by Sons of Malta Found by Workmen in City Building.

In tearing away the old ceiling of first floor of the city building which is now being remodeled by Charles Cook & Son preparatory to building offices for city officers, a coffin was discovered celled up between the joists. The coffin was used by the Sons of Malta, an organization which used the second and third floor back in the sixties.

It was used in ritualistic work and was also carried at the head of the procession when members of that organization sallied forth in parades on the streets of the city. These processions use to strike terror in the hearts of the "kids" when the organization ventured forth at night, and they would all scamper home when the members in their black shrouds and winding clothes marched in parade.

The coffin is six feet long and is made of popular, stained a walnut color and lined with white cloth. The case is of the old style shape with bulged sides, tapering toward the head and foot. The casket is in good repair. The Sons of Malta was an organization on the order of the Brownies and the Owls and had quite a membership in its day.

Oldest British Custom Revived During the War

When the war flung the world into confusion it laid its hand on the oldest custom in the British Isles, a most curious practice that had come from the far-off time of the Druids and had flourished from then without a break until the year 1915. In Burghhead, a little fishing place on the Moray firth, this custom had been practiced from the very dawn of human society. It is the strange ritual of the burning of the clavie.

The clavie is made of a half barrel roughly put together and attached to a long pole by which it is carried. A stone is used to hammer in the wooden pegs that serve for nails, for it is considered as unlawful to allow iron to touch the wood. Old tales tell how a wicker basket with a fish inside used to be burned. Perhaps when the first Druid lighted the first clavie the sacrifice was something greater than a fish. Within more recent times neither basket nor fish appears, but the clavie is filled with chips of wood and shavings plentifully sprinkled with tar. The whole mass is set on fire by means of burning peat.

With an obelisk over his shoulder, the clavie bearer lifts his burning burden on his back and sets off to the site of a Roman camp, rocky promontory that thrusts itself out into the sea. Here a stone pedestal has been erected to hold the fire.

In this strange ritual Druidical and Christian customs are strangely interwoven. The lighting with peat was pagan and harks back to the sacrificial fires of Baal. The circling of the village sunward is from the same source. To the Druids the sun was an immediate object of worship. The use of wooden pegs rather than of iron nails and the use of a stone instead of a hammer are Christian, for the early Christian would not use the iron with which our Lord was nailed to the cross.

Why the custom lingered in quaint little Burghhead we cannot tell. In 1915 the admiralty forbade the showing of all lights seaward and the clavie was left unkindled. In 1919, however, this sole British survival of the worship of fire, the first of all religions and rituals, was rekindled.

Don't Cultivate Harsh Voice

The nearest human object is the most interesting fact of a child's existence, and naturally is the first model, every detail of which is eagerly watched and copied.

It often requires the expenditure of much effort in after life to correct the unpleasant habits of voices and the facial contortions, careless diction and impediments of speech such as lisping and stammering, which are acquired from mothers or nurses during the time when every small muscle of a child's face, vocal apparatus and body were forming their very first habits.

Nothing that a mother can provide for her child's future is more important than the practice of controlling her own voice in the presence of the child, when necessary, and of distinct articulation, and of a reasonable amount of control of her facial expression. When she controls these, control of her moods will take care of itself.

From Pumice Island

Pumice Island, near Salton sea, five miles northwest of Calipatria, in southern California, contributes thirty carloads of pumice to the commerce of the world each year. Pumice Island was once an island in Salton sea, but now, three miles inland, it is entirely surrounded by dry land. However, it retains its old name on local maps. Only a few years ago it was nothing more than a volcanic peak, rising above the waters of the inland sea, but the waters have been receding so rapidly that it now stands three miles back from the shore.

Mocking Bird

A doctor and his Irish coachman were driving past a duck pond when the coachman said: "O! hate them birds, sorr."

"Why should you hate the poor creatures, Pat?" asked the doctor. "I'm sure they never do you any harm."

"Sure, sorr, don't you hear them mocking you? You never pass them but they call 'quack, quack, quack!'"

One on the Boss

"What does this mean, sir?" said the boss to the man coming in a half-hour late.

"It was on account of the awful fog this morning, sir," the fellow explained.

"Fog, fog!" expostulated the boss. "Why, what has the fog to do with it? You do not live across the bay."

"No, sir. I know I don't; but you do, and I thought you would be late."

Just What He Wanted

The lady shopper had ordered about everything hauled down from the shelves.

"I don't see just the right thing," she decided at last. "I want to surprise my husband on his birthday."

"Well," suggested the exhausted clerk, "why don't you hide behind a chair and yell 'Boo!' at him?"

And He Said ??-!-!!

Lady (calling the electric light plant)—The lights in my house have all gone out.

Superintendent—Yes, madam. A parrot got caught in the dynamo.

Lady—Oh, how shocking!

Superintendent—You'd have thought so if you'd heard what he said.

TRACK MEET

Contests Put on by C. E. Society of United Brethren Church.

The C. E. society of United Brethren church held the regular monthly business and social session Tuesday evening at the community house. The business was conducted by the vice president, John Neuding. A program consisting of a piano solo by Mary Willoughby, a cornet solo by Charles Kirkpatrick, a violin solo by Charles Pugh, a recitation by Esther Dearth and a number of selections by four members of the Sunday School orchestra were rendered. Following this was a grand indoor track meet in Doolittle institute, Dunmore college, Wisefox university and Hardknox university entered the contests in the following events: Hazing a freshman an aquatic event; one yard dash, shot-put, discus throw, standing broad grin, continuous gum, a relay race. The prize, a loving cup, was carried off by Doolittle. This proved to be a mirth provoker to both old and young who entered into the contests with vim and gave their various yells until all were hoarse. The social committee served a delectable lunch to forty-five.

SHRINE CIRCUS

More Than 1000 Orphans Will be at Big Show Next Week.

The Shrine circus that will be presented at the coliseum, Columbus, all next week is one of only two entertainments of its kind in the country at which games of chance are not permitted, according to John G. Robinson, who again will direct the show and who addressed members of Aladdin Temple Tuesday night in Masonic Temple. There will be nothing but entertainment and fun at this circus, Mr. Robinson said.

In this statement he was supported by Captain Harry R. Allen, potentate of Aladdin Temple, and by Mayor Thomas, who is head of the circus secret service bureau. "Anything I find at the coliseum that even appears to be shady will be ousted, pronto," the mayor promised.

In attendance at the meeting was James Dutton, first of the 100 or more performers who will be at the show to arrive in Columbus. He came Tuesday and brought with him his troupe of 13 other entertainers, including his wife. He has not appeared in Columbus since five years ago when he was on the Keith circuit.

Additional pep was put into the meeting by the announcement from Paul Bernard, chairman of Aladdin's orphan committee, that more than 1000 orphans in institutions all over Ohio will be the guests of the Shriners at the circus. Most of this number will be there Tuesday afternoon. Others will be at the other matinee performances during the week.

There are nine different kinds of cradle boards used by the various tribes of North American Indians. The Eskimos did not use such a board. The baby was wrapped in the hood of the mother's fur coat. ASTRONOMERS FIND ANOTHER UNIVERSE

The growth in the known size of the universe which began when Galileo devised his small, low-powered telescope has just received another startling increment at the hands of the astronomers of the Harvard observatory.

This time a new and distinct universe has been found, and its great distance adds a matter of 700,000 light years, or about four quintillions of miles, to the greatest known distance to anything in existence.

Man still continues to diminish in relation to the general plan of things. The new universe is so far away that the rays of light which reach us after traveling through empty space at a rate that would carry them twelve times around the earth in one second have been journeying from the newly discovered universe to the photographic plate of the Mount Wilson telescope ever since the earliest known type of man, the apeman of Java, began evolving from his altogether simian ancestor nearly a million years ago. One cannot grasp its significance, even dimly.

Stars have names, but so far astronomers have had to do without names for universes. "N. G. C. 6822" has been known for many years, but pictures of it made by the 100-inch reflecting telescope at Mount Wilson (Cal.) observatory have now resolved it into a complete universe of suns, like our own stellar universe of suns or "stars." Whether there are also planets or "worlds" cannot be said, because at these immense distances they would not be visible.

In fact, "N. G. C. 6822" itself is wholly invisible to the naked eye. It lies in the constellation known as Sagittarius, the Archer, which is itself too close to the sun at this time of year to be visible.

Visible from the southern hemisphere are the Magellanic clouds, which are now known to be stellar systems wholly separate from our own and from the Milky Way. In apparent magnitude "N. G. C. 6822" is very much smaller than the Magellanic clouds, but the great difference in size is only apparent, for it is vastly farther away. In other respects it is similar.

It is a universe, distinct and isolated in space by distances which, when compared with those between the earth and other objects in our own universe, such, for instance, as the distance to the nearest fixed star (some 200,000 times as far as from the sun to the earth), are even then almost incomparable.

The mind reels. It has been said that nothing so greatly influences to a belief in religion as the study of astronomy.—Outlook.

SMALL BLAZE

Second Story of Dr. H. C. Allen Building Caught Fire Tuesday.

A fire on the second floor of the Dr. H. C. Allen office building was discovered Tuesday evening about 9:30 o'clock. When located by Fire Chief J. M. Baer, the flames had eaten thru the floor and joist of the second floor and had enveloped the room. The heat was so intense it had blistered the paint on the woodwork of the room.

The upper story was not occupied, but a family had made arrangements to rent the rooms and these had just been cleaned up. How the fire started is a mystery. Dr. Allen was in his office until 8 o'clock that evening and there was no fire left in the building.

The building was insured in the T. P. Brown Insurance agency. The loss is estimated at between two and three hundred dollars.

A Serious Case

A notoriously absent-minded man was observed walking down the street with one foot continually in the gutter, the other on the pavement. A friend meeting him said: "Good evening. How are you?" "Well," replied the absent-minded one. "I thought I was very well when I left home, but now I don't know what's the matter with me. I've been limping for the last half hour."

Where Is Florence?

An old colored woman came up to the ticket window at a big railway station and addressed the agent. "I wants a ticket to Florence," she said. The ticket agent spent some minutes turning over railway guides, apparently with no success, and then asked: "Where is Florence?" "Settin' over dar on de bench," replied the colored woman.—Everybody's Magazine.

TRACK MEET

Contests Put on by C. E. Society of United Brethren Church.

The C. E. society of United Brethren church held the regular monthly business and social session Tuesday evening at the community house. The business was conducted by the vice president, John Neuding. A program consisting of a piano solo by Mary Willoughby, a cornet solo by Charles Kirkpatrick, a violin solo by Charles Pugh, a recitation by Esther Dearth and a number of selections by four members of the Sunday School orchestra were rendered. Following this was a grand indoor track meet in the Doolittle Institute, Dunmore college, Wisefox university and Hardknox university entered the contests in the following events: Hazing a freshman an aquatic event; one yard dash, shot-put, discus throw, standing broad grin, continuous glum, a relay race. The prize, a loving cup, was carried off by Doolittle. This proved to be a mirth provoker to both old and young who entered into the contests with vim and gave their various yells until all were hoarse. The social committee served a delectable lunch to forty-five.

SHRINE CIRCUS

More Than 1000 Orphans Will be at Big Show Next Week.

The Shrine circus that will be presented at the coliseum, Columbus, all next week is one of only two entertainments of its kind in the country at which games of chance are not permitted, according to John G. Robinson, who again will direct the show and who addressed members of Aladdin Temple Tuesday night in Masonic Temple. There will be nothing but entertainment and fun at this circus, Mr. Robinson said.

In this statement he was supported by Captain Harry R. Allen, potentate of Aladdin Temple, and by Mayor Thomas, who is head of the circus secret service bureau. "Anything I find at the coliseum that even appears to be shady will be ousted, pronto," the mayor promised.

In attendance at the meeting was James Dutton, first of the 100 or more performers who will be at the show to arrive in Columbus. He came Tuesday and brought with him his troupe of 13 other entertainers, including his wife. He has not appeared in Columbus since five years ago when he was on the Keith circuit.

Additional pep was put into the meeting by the announcement from Paul Bernard, chairman of Aladdin's orphan committee, that more than 1000 orphans in institutions all over Ohio will be the guests of the Shriners at the circus. Most of this number will be there Tuesday afternoon. Others will be at the other matinee performances during the week.

CRADLE BOARDS.

There are nine different kinds of cradle boards used by the various tribes of North American Indians. The Eskimos did not use such a board. The baby was wrapped in the hood of the mother's fur coat. In the most southern tribes the baby was merely bound to the mother's back by a strip of cloth long enough to hold it.

ASTRONOMERS FIND ANOTHER UNIVERSE

Add 700,000 Light Years to Greatest Known Distance.

The growth in the known size of the universe which began when Galileo devised his small, low-powered telescope has just received another startling increment at the hands of the astronomers of the Harvard observatory.

This time a new and distinct universe has been found, and its great distance adds a matter of 700,000 light years, or about four quintillions of miles, to the greatest known distance to anything in existence.

Man still continues to diminish in relation to the general plan of things. The new universe is so far away that the rays of light which reach us after traveling through empty space at a rate that would carry them twelve times around the earth in one second have been journeying from the newly discovered universe to the photographic plate of the Mount Wilson telescope ever since the earliest known type of man, the apeman of Java, began evolving from his altogether simian ancestor nearly a million years ago. One cannot grasp its significance, even dimly.

Stars have names, but so far astronomers have had to do without names for universes. "N. G. C. 6822" has been known for many years, but pictures of it made by the 100-inch reflecting telescope at Mount Wilson (Cal.) observatory have now resolved it into a complete universe of suns, like our own stellar universe of suns or "stars." Whether there are also planets or "worlds" cannot be said, because at these immense distances they would not be visible.

In fact, "N. G. C. 6822" itself is wholly invisible to the naked eye. It lies in the constellation known as Sagittarius, the Archer, which is itself too close to the sun at this time of year to be visible.

Visible from the southern hemisphere are the Magellanic clouds, which are now known to be stellar systems wholly separate from our own and from the Milky Way. In apparent magnitude "N. G. C. 6822" is very much smaller than the Magellanic clouds, but the great difference in size is only apparent, for it is vastly farther away. In other respects it is similar.

It is a universe, distinct and isolated in space by distances which, when compared with those between the earth and other objects in our own universe, such, for instance, as the distance to the nearest fixed star (some 200,000 times as far as from the sun to the earth), are even then almost incomparable.

The mind reels. It has been said that nothing so greatly influences to a belief in religion as the study of astronomy.—Outlook.

SMALL BLAZE

A fire on the second floor of the Dr. H. C. Allen office building was discovered Tuesday evening about 9:30 o'clock. When located by Fire Chief J. M. Baer, the flames had eaten thru the floor and joist of the second floor and had enveloped the room. The heat was so intense it had blistered the paint on the woodwork of the room.

The upper story was not occupied, but a family had made arrangements to rent the rooms and these had just been cleaned up. How the fire started is a mystery. Dr. Allen was in his office until 8 o'clock that evening and there was no fire left in the building.

The building was insured in the T. P. Brown Insurance agency. The loss is estimated at between two and three hundred dollars.

California Cork Trees

It is said that within the past decade cork culture has shown promise of becoming one of the important industries of California. A considerable acreage of Spanish cork oak is now in cultivation at the forest plantation owned by the University of California, and all of the trees are, it is said, thriving and growing vigorously. On the elder trees there is a good growth of young bark, some of it more than an inch in thickness.

Most of the trees are now about seven years old and are from twenty-five to thirty feet in height and from eight to ten inches in diameter at the butts. This culture has been made in ordinary soil. Both the climate and soil seem very favorable to the growth of the Spanish cork oak.

This is the first time that any attempt has been made to grow cork in California and the experiment seems to have been worth making.

Latin Words in Our Language.
The Norman-French people who settled England gave to English-speaking people several thousand words with a few alterations. Then, at the Revival of Learning, a still larger number of Latin words came into our language. The Latin word facilis became facile; the word natio appeared as nation; the word opinio as opinion; the verb separatum as separate; and so on with thousands of other words. And, since that time, new Latin words have been coming yearly into our language and settling there.—From "The Art of Writing English."

HUBBY PARTIAL TO BLONDE HAIR

By LILLIAN M. ROYCE

MRS. DILLOP stirred uneasily, then, suddenly wide awake, switched on the bedside light. Mr. Dillop lay sleeping, but not peacefully, at her side. Every now and then he threw his arms wildly about, and broken sentences came in gasps.
"Nell, Nell!" he was saying, "don't be so hard on me. Oh, Nell, why not praise me instead of finding fault all the time. Oh, Nell—Nell!"

Mrs. Dillop's first name wasn't Nell. It was Jane, and in the ten years of their married life Mr. Dillop had been a most devoted husband. To be sure, there had been the time when Mrs. Dillop had sacrificed her ash blonde hair, the pride of Dillop's heart, to the prevailing fashion for sleek black locks, when the Egyptian craze had its day. After that she had refused to allow it to return to its natural color, rather fancying herself as a brunette—but she hadn't supposed he would look at another woman.

Then she had spoken to her husband about his increasing waistline and he had promised to buy some kind of an exercising machine, but it must have been about that time that he met "Nell," for he never mentioned the subject again.

Well, if "Nell" fancied a little fat man with a stomach like that of St. Nicholas in the nursery classic, "The Night Before Christmas," she could have him. It might break Mrs. Dillop's heart, but she wouldn't live with a man who had ceased to love her. She listened breathlessly as Mr. Dillop continued:

"Nothing seems to please you. I could not come yesterday. I was afraid my wife might suspect something. Sometimes, Nell, I'd like to tear out every blonde hair in your head—"

The broken sentences continued at intervals and Mrs. Dillop lay tear-eyed and distressed until morning, when she found it difficult to be civil to her husband. But Mr. Dillop wore a distracted air and refused to see the storm clouds brewing.

That evening he was late to dinner again, and so the next afternoon Mrs. Dillop was following her husband when he left his office and turned up a side street. He dived into a doorway, and when his wife reached it he had disappeared.

The entrance was plastered with signs—an immense pair of false teeth advertising a painless dentist; samples of the chiropodist's art, a man in a lion skin, purporting to be the strongest man in the world, and any other number of others, but in the center, and dominating all the rest was a cheap framed lithograph of a handsome blonde female with the caption, "Madame Zyko, Knows All—Tells All."

"She'd better tell me what she is doing with my husband," said Mrs. Dillop to herself, for she decided at once that Madame Zyko must be the blonde of her husband's troubled dreams. She was still gazing at the picture when Madame Zyko herself came into the hallway and walked up the steps, glancing at Mrs. Dillop as she passed. Evidently Mr. Dillop had arrived ahead of "Nell." Mrs. Dillop would give him time to greet his charmer before she started anything.

She paused before a door adorned with another lithograph of the fortune teller and pushed it open, but the place was silent and empty. From a distance she could hear the sound of blows being exchanged. Perhaps "Nell" was beating Mr. Dillop. Remembering the robust figure of Madame, Mrs. Dillop felt a throb of pity for her misguided spouse.

But from quite another direction Madame Zyko came forward and Mrs. Dillop, looking into her placid blue eyes, didn't know just what to say. Madame relieved her embarrassment. "You were downstairs but couldn't make up your mind? You want to know about your husband—yes?"

Mrs. Dillop looked up quickly. How did Madame know she wished to know about her husband? Madame placidly explained: "All the ladies want to know about their husbands."

She looked wildly at Madame Zyko. "What's that?" Madame seemed to rouse herself with difficulty. "That? Oh, that is my husband. Perhaps you noticed his picture downstairs. His studio is just down the hall. He is what you call physical culture—makes slender. He is working with a man now that wishes to reduce. But his wife must not know until he gets back his youthful figure. He thinks my husband very harsh, but it is the only way. He tell my husband that his wife have beautiful blonde hair and dye it and almost break his heart."

"But the name, 'Nell,'" said Mrs. Dillop, still suspicious. "That's not a man's name."
"No, his name is Nello—Nello, the strong man," they call him in the theater, but the men say 'Nell.'"
Madame abruptly resumed her gaze into the crystal, but Mrs. Dillop thrust a five-dollar bill into her hand, which Madame took with perplexed thanks. Then Mrs. Dillop hurried in the direction of her favorite beauty parlor. Could any treatment make her hair return to the blonde shade to which her husband had always been so partial? Well, she would try. Surely such devotion as Mr. Dillop's deserved some return.

Expert Tea-Tasters

The grading of teas for market is accomplished by tasting. It cannot be done in any other way. To do it well is extremely difficult. Very few men have the delicacy of taste requisite for the purpose, and they are able to command large salaries. An expert tea-taster will often taste as many as 1,000 samples of tea in a day. He does not swallow the tea. To drink much tea would render his taste less acute and his judgment proportionately less accurate. Nevertheless, the professional tea-taster is liable to suffer from headache, giddiness and other disagreeable symptoms.

Largest Uncut Stone

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal, discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately twenty-one cubic inches, weighs 2,572,332 karats and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opals, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,053,937 karats, but has a number of flaws.

Commercial Honesty

"No," said the old man sternly. "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representation, and I will not begin now." For a moment he was silent, and the clerk who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right. "No," said the old man again, "I will not do it. It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. Mark it 'A Shoe Fit for a Queen,' and put it in the window. A queen does not have to do much walking."

TO BLONDE HAIR

By LILLIAN M. ROYCE

(© 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MRS. DILLOP stirred uneasily, then, suddenly wide awake, switched on the bedside light. Mr. Dillop lay sleeping, but not peacefully, at her side. Every now and then he threw his arms wildly about, and broken sentences came in gasps.
"Nell, Nell!" he was saying, "don't be so hard on me. Oh, Nell, why not praise me instead of finding fault all the time. Oh, Nell—Nell!"

Mrs. Dillop's first name wasn't Nell, it was Jane, and in the ten years of their married life Mr. Dillop had been a most devoted husband. To be sure, there had been the time when Mrs. Dillop had sacrificed her ash blonde hair, the pride of Dillop's heart, to the prevailing fashion for sleek black locks, when the Egyptian craze had its day. After that she had refused to allow it to return to its natural color, rather fancying herself as a brunette—but she hadn't supposed he would look at another woman.

Then she had spoken to her husband about his increasing waistline and he had promised to buy some kind of an exercising machine, but it must have been about that time that he met "Nell," for he never mentioned the subject again.

Well, if "Nell" fancied a little fat man with a stomach like that of St. Nicholas in the nursery classic, "The Night Before Christmas," she could have him. It might break Mrs. Dillop's heart, but she wouldn't live with a man who had ceased to love her. She listened breathlessly as Mr. Dillop continued:

"Nothing seems to please you. I could not come yesterday. I was afraid my wife might suspect something. Sometimes, Nell, I'd like to tear out every blonde hair in your head!"

The broken sentences continued at intervals and Mrs. Dillop lay tear-eyed and distressed until morning, when she found it difficult to be civil to her husband. But Mr. Dillop wore a distracted air and refused to see the storm clouds brewing.

That evening he was late to dinner again, and so the next afternoon Mrs. Dillop was following her husband when he left his office and turned up a side street. He dived into a doorway, and when his wife reached it he had disappeared.

The entrance was plastered with signs—an immense pair of false teeth advertising a painless dentist; samples of the chiropodist's art, a man in a lion skin, purporting to be the strongest man in the world, and any other number of others, but in the center, and dominating all the rest was a cheap framed lithograph of a handsome blonde female with the caption, "Madame Zyko, Knows All—Tells All."

"She'd better tell me what she is doing with my husband," said Mrs. Dillop to herself, for she decided at once that Madame Zyko must be the blonde of her husband's troubled dreams. She was still gazing at the picture when Madame Zyko herself came into the hallway and walked up the steps, glancing at Mrs. Dillop as she passed. Evidently Mr. Dillop had arrived ahead of "Nell." Mrs. Dillop would give him time to greet his charmer before she started anything.

She paused before a door adorned with another lithograph of the fortune teller and pushed it open, but the place was silent and empty. From a distance she could hear the sound of blows being exchanged. Perhaps "Nell" was beating Mr. Dillop. Remembering the robust figure of Madame, Mrs. Dillop felt a throb of pity for her misguided spouse.

But from quite another direction Madame Zyko came forward and Mrs. Dillop, looking into her placid blue eyes, didn't know just what to say. Madame relieved her embarrassment.

"You were downstairs but couldn't make up your mind? You want to know about your husband—yes?"

Mrs. Dillop looked up quickly. How did Madame know she wished to know about her husband? Madame placidly explained: "All the ladies want to know about their husbands."

She looked wildly at Madame Zyko. "What's that?" Madame seemed to rouse herself with difficulty. "That? Oh, that is my husband. Perhaps you noticed his picture downstairs. His studio is just down the hall. He is what you call physical culture—makes slender. He is working with a man now that wishes to reduce. But his wife must not know until he gets back his youthful figure. He thinks my husband very harsh, but it is the only way. He tell my husband that his wife have beautiful blonde hair and dye it and almost break his heart."

"But the name, 'Nell,'" said Mrs. Dillop, still suspicious. "That's not a man's name."

"No, his name is Nello—Nello, the strong man," they call him in the theater, but the men say 'Nell!'"

Madame abruptly resumed her gaze into the crystal, but Mrs. Dillop thrust a five-dollar bill into her hand, which Madame took with perplexed thanks.

Then Mrs. Dillop hurried in the direction of her favorite beauty parlor. Could any treatment make her hair return to the blonde shade to which her husband had always been so partial? Well, she would try. Surely such devotion as Mr. Dillop's deserved some return.

Expert Tea-Tasters

The grading of teas for market is accomplished by tasting. It cannot be done in any other way. To do it well is extremely difficult. Very few men have the delicacy of taste requisite for the purpose, and they are able to command large salaries. An expert tea-taster will often taste as many as 1,000 samples of tea in a day. He does not swallow the tea. To drink much tea would render his taste less acute and his judgment proportionately less accurate. Nevertheless, the professional tea-taster is liable to suffer from headache, giddiness and other disagreeable symptoms.

Largest Uncut Stone

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal, discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately twenty-one cubic inches, weighs 2,572.332 karats and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opals, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,653,937 karats, but has a number of flaws.

Commercial Honesty

"No," said the old man sternly. "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representation, and I will not begin now." For a moment he was silent, and the clerk who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right. "No," said the old man again, "I will not do it. It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. Mark it 'A Shoe Fit for a Queen,' and put it in the window. A queen does not have to do much walking."

Observing Arbor Day Is Big Event

Associated With Patriotic and Esthetic as Well as Economic Ideas.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Arbor day has become associated all over the United States with patriotic and esthetic as well as economic ideas. It is at once a means of doing practical good to the community and an incentive to civic betterment, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The planting of trees by school children is usually accompanied by ceremonies intended both to impress upon those present the beauty of trees and their effect in improving the appearance of school grounds, streets, parks and highways and to lead them to a realization of the value of community national foresight.
Time of Observance Varies.
The time of observance of Arbor day varies greatly in different states and countries, being determined somewhat by the climatic conditions. Sometimes a day which is already a holiday is selected, as in Alabama and Texas, where Washington's birthday has been chosen. In many states of the Union it is combined with "bird day." In general the date is early in the year in the South and is set further along toward summer in the more northern states, beginning in February and ending in May. More than half the states have enacted a law for the observance of that day.

Planting of trees on Arbor day can provide a direct economic resource only in comparatively treeless regions or where windbreaks and timber and fuel for the home and neighborhood use are needed. Forest plantations, whose chief purpose is the raising of timber for commercial use or the protection of watersheds upon which cities and towns depend for their water supply, must be left to foresters. However, yearly plantings accompanied by appropriate exercises serve to keep the people continually reminded of the value and necessity of the work of the foresters, and they have such a far-reaching effect on the community spirit, and through that on economic and social betterment, that no community can afford to neglect Arbor day.

Teach Important Lesson.
An even more important lesson—the damage done to our natural parks and woods by the thoughtless and selfish vandal—may be taught through a judicious observance of the day. What fire is to the forest, this marauder is to the community park and woodlands in the destruction of ornamental trees and shrubs. The national and state governments are using every possible means to educate the public in the care of the forest, whose relation to the welfare of man is becoming more and better understood with every passing year of education and co-operation.

Keeping Silo Doors in Place While Emptying
A large percentage of farm silos have removable doors. As they are taken out when feeding the silage they are sometimes dropped to the bottom and put in the barn or piled some where for safe keeping.
As the doors are taken out I find it far better to stick the top door under the eaves somewhere and then as each door comes out slip it in the opening above, says an Ohio writer in Successful Farming. When the silo is empty, the doors are all in place. This helps to hold the empty silo rigid while it is empty. Empty silos are the ones affected by heavy winds. In filling the silo the replacing is reversed so that when the top is reached the last door is under the roof just where you want it.
This saves a lot of bother during filling, as many farmers fasten each door on a rope and haul it up the chute as the silo fills up. Tramping silage keeps it lots more than pulling doors.

Alfalfa Is One of Most Profitable Farm Crops
Where the soil is suitable for alfalfa, it is one of the most profitable crops for the stockman, the diversified farmer, or the cotton farmer, and where possible, every farm should have an alfalfa patch, the size to be governed by the amount of hay and pasturage needed to maintain the live stock kept on the farm. Many have been discouraged because some writer would have one think that its requirements are such as to exclude the average dirt farmer. By following a few simple suggestions any farmer can tell whether his soil is suited to grow alfalfa, and should the soil be suited, he can, by carefully observing a few points, grow it successfully and with profit to himself.

Reduction Made in Cost by Using Very Best Seed
If farmers had to use the seed generally grown fifty years ago, many of them would be bankrupt and the remainder would be producing crops at 40 per cent greater cost than at the present time. Likewise it would be possible to make a further reduction of 15 per cent by using today the very best seed of varieties known to be adapted to our conditions. These statements are based on figures compiled by the Kansas State Agricultural college in which seed such as was used in early days has been compared with varieties generally grown at the present time.

Paper Is Made From Refuse of Sugar Cane
The manufacture of paper from bagasse, the dry refuse of sugar cane after the juice has been expressed, has often been advocated, but never accomplished on a commercial scale. The increased cost of wood pulp has stimulated experiments for solving this problem. It has long been known that excellent paper can be made from sugar cane fiber, but the difficulty has been to preserve the fiber intact while extracting the juice for sugar making. The present machinery cuts and tears the fiber so that the bagasse is fit only for fuel.
Some time ago there was organized in Cuba a company which has constructed a large plant to make a practical test of a patented process for expressing the juice and conserving the fiber and pulp for paper. The fiber is separated from the pulp by machinery, and then by evaporation the water is eliminated, leaving the dry fiber and pulp containing the solids and sucrose, from which sugar is made. The fiber and pulp are then baled separately for shipment to the United States, where the sugar is extracted by diffusion.
By this treatment the fiber is uninjured and can be used in making high-grade paper at a considerable saving, as compared with the cost of wood pulp. The residue from the pulp is also suitable for low-grade paper. It is claimed that the preliminary tests have proved successful and that, in addition to preserving the bagasse for paper manufacture, a larger percentage of sucrose is obtained than is possible by the old methods of extraction in sugar houses.

"Hornbook" Used Before the Days of Printing
A hornbook was the alphabet-book or primer for learning to read in universal use in England before the days of printing, and common even down to the time of George II. It consisted of a single leaf set in an oak frame, covered with a thin sheet of transparent horn as a protection, whence its name. The leaf contained on one side the alphabet, in large and small letters, also the Lord's Prayer and the nine digits, together with a large number of monosyllables.
The frame had a handle, and this was generally provided with a hole for a string, by means of which the hornbook could be suspended from the pupil's girdle. The back of the frame was ornamented with a rude sketch of St. George and the dragon.
Hornbooks are now very rare. Frequent allusions to them are found in the older writers.—Detroit News.

Young, but Gallant
Little Jackie took the church collection very seriously, and every Sunday morning he saw that his penny was ready.
One day, just as the slidesmen began to take the collection, Jackie noticed that a guest in the family pew was not duly provided.
Sliding along the seat he whispered: "Where's your penny?"
"I didn't bring one," replied the lady.
Time was short, and the matter was urgent, but Jackie came to a decision with great promptitude.
Thrusting his penny into the lady's hand, he whispered: "Here, take mine! I'll pay for you, and I'll get under the seat."

Charged the Camera
Once during an African hunt, says Mr. E. M. Newman in the American Magazine, a charging rhinoceros gave us some trouble. Two camera men in my party were filming him, but being photographed seemed to bore him, and he headed directly for one of the cameras. The man, relying on the hunter who was with us, kept on turning; but the hunter did not fire quite soon enough. The rhinoceros crashed down dead on top of the camera. Fortunately, the camera man had jumped aside just in time.
The second man filmed the whole scene, and it made a great picture when we recovered the smashed camera from under the beast, saved that film and combined it with the other.

City of Capua
The city of Capua of ancient Italy opened its gates to Hannibal after the Battle of Cannae, 216 B. C., and the army there went into winter quarters. Capua was the most luxurious city in Italy, and Hannibal's army was greatly enervated as a result of its residence there. When the Romans regained possession of Capua, 211, B. C., they scourged and beheaded the surviving senators who had not poisoned themselves before the surrender of the city. Only two persons, it is said, escaped: one, a woman who had prayed for the success of the Roman arms, and the other a woman who had succored some prisoners. The word "Capua" became a synonym for luxury and self-indulgence.

Supreme
"You may talk," said the stout man monopolizing the fire, "of your Baldwins and your Lloyd Georges, but I tell you there is only one strong man in your so-called Britain of today, and that's our commercial traveler. He takes orders from no man."
Possible Reason
"Why does Russia celebrate Christmas fourteen days after the rest of the world?"
"Well, it takes a long time to get a Christmas present to Russia."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Learned Lesson From Animals.
As eminent a man as John Wesley, in his directions on the art of keeping well, wrote that "many of the medicines used among the common people of my time were first discovered by animals using them to cure their aches and pains." He said also: "It looked reasonable that if they would heal animals, they would also heal man."
A Nursery King.
"Old King Cole," beloved of the nursery, was a British king who lived about A. D. 300. His accession was hailed with joy. To this day a large earthenware at Colchester is called "King Cole's Kitchen."

Origin of Word "Doll" Obscure.
The origin of the word "doll" is obscure, but the common explanation frequently given that the word is an abbreviation of "idol" or "idiot" is said by the best authorities to be certainly wrong. It is thought probable that the word is derived from Doll or Dolly, diminutives of the woman's name, "Dorothy," which in Greek signifies the gift of God; hence the idea of a gift to a child for a plaything.
No Harm Done.
Morals will creep into business. Here's a sign in the window saying, "Good men's shoes."—Savannah News.

Observing Arbor Day Is Big Event
Associated With Patriotic and Esthetic as Well as Economic Ideas.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Arbor day has become associated all over the United States with patriotic and esthetic as well as economic ideas. It is at once a means of doing practical good to the community and an incentive to civic betterment, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The planting of trees by school children is usually accompanied by ceremonies intended both to impress upon those present the beauty of trees and their effect in improving the appearance of school grounds, streets, parks and highways and to lead them to a realization of the value of community national foresight.

Time of Observance Varies.
The time of observance of Arbor day varies greatly in different states and countries, being determined somewhat by the climatic conditions. Sometimes a day which is already a holiday is selected, as in Alabama and Texas, where Washington's birthday has been chosen. In many states of the Union it is combined with "bird day." In general the date is early in the year in the South and is set further along toward summer in the more northern states, beginning in February and ending in May. More than half the states have enacted a law for the observance of that day.

Planting of trees on Arbor day can provide a direct economic resource only in comparatively treeless regions or where windbreaks and timber and fuel for the home and neighborhood uses are needed. Forest plantations, whose chief purpose is the raising of timber for commercial use or the protection of watersheds upon which cities and towns depend for their water supply, must be left to foresters. However, yearly plantings accompanied by appropriate exercises serve to keep the people continually reminded of the value and necessity of the work of the foresters, and they have such a far-reaching effect on the community spirit, and through that on economic and social betterment, that no community can afford to neglect Arbor day.

Teach Important Lesson.
An even more important lesson—the damage done to our natural parks and woods by the thoughtless and selfish vandal—may be taught through a judicious observance of the day. What fire is to the forest, this marauder is to the community park and woodlands in the destruction of ornamental trees and shrubs. The national and state governments are using every possible means to educate the public in the care of the forest, whose relation to the welfare of man is becoming more and better understood with every passing year of education and co-operation.

Keeping Silo Doors in Place While Emptying
A large percentage of farm silos have removable doors. As they are taken out when feeding the silage they are sometimes dropped to the bottom and put in the barn or piled somewhere for safe keeping.
As the doors are taken out I find it far better to stick the top door under the eaves somewhere and then as each door comes out slip it in the opening above, says an Ohio writer in Successful Farming. When the silo is empty, the doors are all in place. This helps to hold the empty silo rigid while it is empty. Empty silos are the ones affected by heavy winds. In filling the silo the replacing is reversed so that when the top is reached the last door is under the roof just where you want it.
This saves a lot of bother during filling, as many farmers fasten each door on a rope and haul it up the chute as the silo fills up. Tramping silage keeps it lots more than pulling doors.
Alfalfa Is One of Most Profitable Farm Crops
Where the soil is suitable for alfalfa, it is one of the most profitable crops for the stockman, the diversified farmer, or the cotton farmer, and where possible, every farm should have an alfalfa patch, the size to be governed by the amount of hay and pasture needed to maintain the live stock kept on the farm. Many have been discouraged because some writer would have one think that its requirements are such as to exclude the average dirt farmer. By following a few simple suggestions any farmer can tell whether his soil is suited to grow alfalfa, and should the soil be suited, he can, by carefully observing a few points, grow it successfully and with profit to himself.
Reduction Made in Cost by Using Very Best Seed
If farmers had to use the seed generally grown fifty years ago, many of them would be bankrupt and the remainder would be producing crops at 40 per cent greater cost than at the present time. Likewise it would be possible to make a further reduction of 15 per cent by using today the very best seed of varieties known to be adapted to our conditions. These statements are based on figures compiled by the Kansas State Agricultural college in which seed such as was used in early days has been compared with varieties generally grown at the present time.

Paper Is Made From Refuse of Sugar Cane
The manufacture of paper from bagasse, the dry refuse of sugar cane after the juice has been expressed, has often been advocated, but never accomplished on a commercial scale. The increased cost of wood pulp has stimulated experiments for solving this problem. It has long been known that excellent paper can be made from sugar cane fiber, but the difficulty has been to preserve the fiber intact while extracting the juice for sugar making. The present machinery cuts and tears the fiber so that the bagasse is fit only for fuel.
Some time ago there was organized in Cuba a company which has constructed a large plant to make a practical test of a patented process for expressing the juice and conserving the fiber and pulp for paper. The fiber is separated from the pulp by machinery, and then by evaporation the water is eliminated, leaving the dry fiber and pulp containing the solids and sucrose, from which sugar is made. The fiber and pulp are then baled separately for shipment to the United States, where the sugar is extracted by diffusion.
By this treatment the fiber is uninjured and can be used in making high-grade paper at a considerable saving, as compared with the cost of wood pulp. The residue from the pulp is also suitable for low-grade paper. It is claimed that the preliminary tests have proved successful and that, in addition to preserving the bagasse for paper manufacture, a larger percentage of sucrose is obtained than is possible by the old methods of extraction in sugar houses.

"Hornbook" Used Before the Days of Printing
A hornbook was the alphabet-book or primer for learning to read in universal use in England before the days of printing, and common even down to the time of George II. It consisted of a single leaf set in an oak frame, covered with a thin sheet of transparent horn as a protection, whence its name. The leaf contained on one side the alphabet, in large and small letters, also the Lord's Prayer and the nine digits, together with a large number of monosyllables.
The frame had a handle, and this was generally provided with a hole for a string, by means of which the hornbook could be suspended from the pupil's girdle. The back of the frame was ornamented with a rude sketch of St. George and the dragon.
Hornbooks are now very rare. Frequent allusions to them are found in the older writers.—Detroit News.

Young, but Gallant
Little Jackie took the church collection very seriously, and every Sunday morning he saw that his penny was ready.
One day, just as the sidesmen began to take the collection, Jackie noticed that a guest in the family pew was not duly provided.
Sliding along the seat he whispered: "Where's your penny?"
"I didn't bring one," replied the lady.
Time was short, and the matter was urgent, but Jackie came to a decision with great promptitude.
Thrusting his penny into the lady's hand, he whispered:
"Here, take mine! I'll pay for you, and I'll get under the seat."

Charged the Camera
Once during an African hunt, says Mr. E. M. Newman in the American Magazine, a charging rhinoceros gave us some trouble. Two camera men in my party were filming him, but being photographed seemed to bore him, and he headed directly for one of the cameras. The man, relying on the hunter who was with us, kept on turning; but the hunter did not fire quite soon enough. The rhinoceros crashed down dead on top of the camera. Fortunately, the camera man had jumped aside just in time.
The second man filmed the whole scene, and it made a great picture when we recovered the smashed camera from under the beast, saved that film and combined it with the other.

City of Capua
The city of Capua of ancient Italy opened its gates to Hannibal after the Battle of Cannae, 216 B. C., and the army there went into winter quarters. Capua was the most luxurious city in Italy, and Hannibal's army was greatly enervated as a result of its residence there. When the Romans regained possession of Capua, 211, B. C., they scourged and beheaded the surviving senators who had not poisoned themselves before the surrender of the city. Only two persons, it is said, escaped: one, a woman who had prayed for the success of the Roman arms, and the other a woman who had succeeded some prisoners. The word "Capua" became a synonym for luxury and self-indulgence.

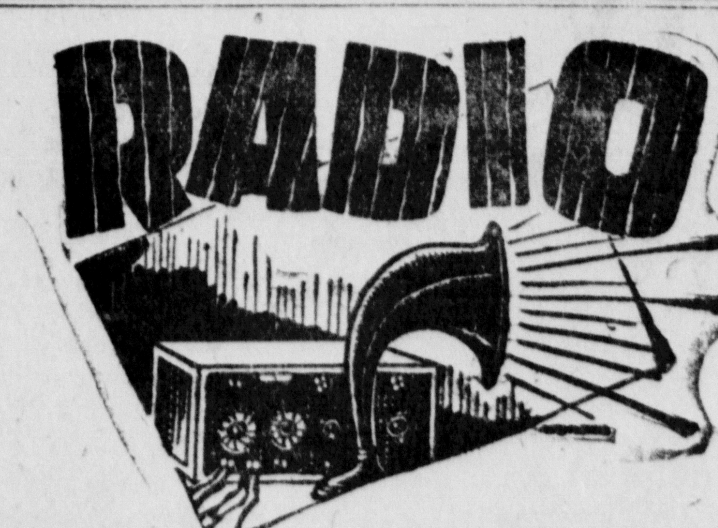

Supreme

Learned Lesson From Animals.
As eminent a man as John Wesley, in his directions on the art of keeping well, wrote that "many of the medicines used among the common people of my time were first discovered by animals using them to cure their aches and pains." He said also: "It looked reasonable that if they would heal animals, they would also heal man."
A Nursery King.
"Old King Cole," beloved of the nursery, was a British king who lived about A. D. 300. His accession was hailed with joy. To this day a large earthenware at Colchester is called "King Cole's Kitchen."

Origin of Word "Doll" Obscure.
The origin of the word "doll" is obscure, but the common explanation frequently given that the word is an abbreviation of "idoll" or "idol" is said by the best authorities to be certainly wrong. It is thought probable that the word is derived from Dolly, diminutive of the woman's name, "Dorothy," which in Greek signifies the gift of God; hence the idea of a gift to a child for a plaything.

BOY SCOUTS

Effort Being Made to Form Organization in City and County.

H. H. Hughes, of Delaware, representative from the National field department regional headquarters American Boy Scouts, was in the city Tuesday with the idea of interesting business men in the scout movement. He said in a talk before the chamber of commerce that Washington, Chillicothe and Lancaster, representing the counties of Fayette, Ross and Fairfield, have temporarily formed scout organizations and is desirous of getting the people who have the interests of the boys at heart to have this city and county join the movement, so that the four counties could and would be a district to itself.

If this county joins it would be the headquarters of the district as one scoutmaster would be appointed to look after the work of the district and he would train volunteer scoutmasters to take charge of each local unit. In this way it would not cost as much as to have a scoutmaster in each city full time. The expense of a camp and paraphernalia would be apportioned and this would materially cut down the upkeep and overhead and would get better results.

Good scouts make good citizens. We owe it to our boys to make good citizens out of them and we can do this by looking after their welfare and proper training. The speaker asked that a committee be appointed to look into the organization and report back the feasibility of joining in a district movement and making a permanent organization here with a national scoutmaster in charge to instruct volunteer scoutmasters. He predicted that this system will work out nicely and will not be nearly as expensive as having a whole time scoutmaster or executive in charge. The Rotary club, he said, has promised to appoint a committee and President Frank E. Barnhill also named a committee.

Willis and Fess Receive Hundreds of Letters From Ohio.

Washington, March 26.—Senators Willis and Fess have received hundreds of printed propaganda letters from Columbus urging that they "work and vote" for any bills before congress for the modification of the Volstead law, and permitting the sale of 3.75 per cent beer. The letters set forth that the Volstead act is "in direct violation of the rights of a free people," and also that it has "created a nation of hypocrites" and has filled the jails with honest men who have made a few gallons of beer or wine. Willis and Fess are paying no attention to the petitions.

WARNS OF PERILS OF GAS FROM CARS

Many Victims of Carbon Monoxide, Says Bureau.

Pittsburgh.—So many deaths from carbon monoxide, a gas present in the exhaust from automobiles, have occurred throughout the country during the past few months that the Pittsburgh station, United States bureau of mines, has been prompted to call the attention of the public to its danger.

Seldom a day passes at this season but the death of one or more persons is recorded. Fatalities are particularly noticeable in the natural gas belt of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, while deaths from the exhaust gas of automobiles are increasing. Carbon monoxide is given off in quantities by burning natural gas, while it is practically always present in the exhaust from gasoline engines.

Thousands of houses in the natural gas belt have no flues for carrying off waste gases, which, in such cases, pass off into the room where the fire is burning. If all windows and doors are closed, as they may be in cold weather when gas is being consumed, the effect sooner or later becomes apparent on the occupants. They become dull and sleepy and, if not aroused, may pass into unconsciousness and eventually die.

The bureau recommends that when a gas heater without a flue is used, a window or door be partly open at all times; half an inch or so will answer. The danger from waste automobile gases is no less real. If the engine has to be kept running in the garage, the garage must be ventilated. Drivers are warned never to crawl under a car when the engine is running, no matter how good the ventilation. And sitting in an automobile, in a garage, with the engine in motion, is distinctly a dangerous thing to do.

Another hazard of exhaust gas is that of sitting in a tightly closed automobile on a highway, or elsewhere, with the engine going. The car may be fitted with a leaky heater, through which the exhaust gets into and concentrates in the car, or the exhaust from the muffler, in some manner, gets in and accumulates in its confinement. "If people must sit in an automobile," says the bureau, "they must have some fresh air entering the tonneau. Otherwise they are playing with death."

Scottish Islands Refuse Aid From English Hands

London.—A condition likened to Irish famine times is now existing in the Hebrides, the group of forsaken islands off the bleak coast of Scotland, where, of the population of 40,000, there are 30,000 people starving and powerless themselves to relieve their condition.

At the best these people barely make a livelihood. Their life is a continual struggle against a relentless climate and a still more relentless soil. The last year has been more than usually hard.

To help these people is a problem. They live in poor huts, talk only their own language and have a hearty dislike for anything English or modern. But the real tragedy is that they resist any suggestion that they should migrate to more productive land. They have stubbornly refused to do this for the last hundred years.

The islanders regard with suspicion the efforts of any outsider to help them. They are content to sit in their cottages, awaiting aid from their own government that is not forthcoming because of the lack of funds.

Many Scotch charitable organizations are combining to offer relief to the islanders, but at the best their charity could only serve to keep them until next winter when it is more than probable the same conditions will be repeated.

Juryman Finds He Owes State for His Services

Claremore, Okla.—W. E. Sunday, local business man, has found jury service unprofitable. He went to the courthouse to collect his fee for two days' service, amounting to $6, but was informed he had been late both days and that the judge had fined him $5 for each offense. So instead of having something coming to him, he owes the state $4.

Bridge Opens Yearly

Grand Haven, Mich.—The swing bridge over Grand river at Eastmanville is probably the most expensive in the world, according to government engineers. It costs $1,500 to swing the bridge once, this representing the salary of the tender, for one year. The bridge is opened only to see if it will work. The Ottawa county road commission and the state highway department desire a fixed bridge to replace the present structure.

Pittsburgh.—So many deaths from carbon monoxide, a gas present in the exhaust from automobiles, have occurred throughout the country during the past few months that the Pittsburgh station, United States bureau of mines, has been prompted to call the attention of the public to its danger.

Seldom a day passes at this season but the death of one or more persons is recorded. Fatalities are particularly noticeable in the natural gas belt of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, while deaths from the exhaust gas of automobiles are increasing. Carbon monoxide is given off in quantities by burning natural gas, while it is practically always present in the exhaust from gasoline engines.

Thousands of houses in the natural gas belt have no flues for carrying off waste gases, which, in such cases, pass off into the room where the fire is burning. If all windows and doors are closed, as they may be in cold weather when gas is being consumed, the effect sooner or later becomes apparent on the occupants. They become dull and sleepy and, if not aroused, may pass into unconsciousness and eventually die.

The bureau recommends that when a gas heater without a flue is used, a window or door be partly open at all times; half an inch or so will answer. The danger from waste automobile gases is no less real. If the engine has to be kept running in the garage, the garage must be ventilated. Drivers are warned never to crawl under a car when the engine is running, no matter how good the ventilation. And sitting in an automobile, in a garage, with the engine in motion, is distinctly a dangerous thing to do.

Another hazard of exhaust gas is that of sitting in a tightly closed automobile on a highway, or elsewhere, with the engine going. The car may be fitted with a leaky heater, through which the exhaust gets into and concentrates in the car, or the exhaust from the muffler, in some manner, gets in and accumulates in its confinement. "If people must sit in an automobile," says the bureau, "they must have some fresh air entering the tonneau. Otherwise they are playing with death."

Scottish Islands Refuse Aid From English Hands

London.—A condition likened to Irish famine times is now existing in the Hebrides, the group of forsaken islands off the bleak coast of Scotland, where, of the population of 40,000, there are 30,000 people starving and powerless themselves to relieve their condition.

At the best these people barely make a livelihood. Their life is a continual struggle against a relentless climate and a still more relentless soil. The last year has been more than usually hard.

To help these people is a problem. They live in poor huts, talk only their own language and have a hearty dislike for anything English or modern. But the real tragedy is that they resist any suggestion that they should migrate to more productive land. They have stubbornly refused to do this for the last hundred years.

The Islanders regard with suspicion the efforts of any outsider to help them. They are content to sit in their cottages, awaiting aid from their own government that is not forthcoming because of the lack of funds.

Many Scotch charitable organizations are combining to offer relief to the islanders, but at the best their charity could only serve to keep them until next winter when it is more than probable the same conditions will be repeated.

Juryman Finds He Owes State for His Services

Claremore, Okla.—W. E. Sunday, local business man, has found jury service unprofitable. He went to the courthouse to collect his fee for two days' service, amounting to $6, but was informed he had been late both days and that the judge had fined him $5 for each offense. So instead of having something coming to him, he owes the state $4.

Bridge Opens Yearly

Grand Haven, Mich.—The swing bridge over Grand river at Eastmanville is probably the most expensive in the world, according to government engineers. It costs $1,500 to swing the bridge once, this representing the salary of the tender, for one year. The bridge is opened only to see if it will work. The Ottawa county road commission and the state highway department desire a fixed bridge to replace the present structure.

Man Divorces Wife He Ignored for 33 Years
Declaring that he has lived with his wife in name only for 33 years, Clinton Scollard, poet and college professor, of New York city, has been granted a divorce.
Scollard and his wife quarreled after having been married five days. They were foes from that day on, he said. The husband gave his wife a home and $16,000 cash after they quarreled, he told the court.

DRAIN YOUR OIL.

Right now is a good time to drain the old oil out of your crank case and put in a gallon of that Warco oil, which will relieve your Ford car from that disagreeable chatter that comes from the hardening of the transmission linings.

CONFIDENCE

The most beautiful of all human relationships are based on CONFIDENCE. Love is based on confidence, friendship is based on confidence, happy marriages are based on confidence; and so, confidence is the highest aim a business institution can achieve, because it introduces into the processes of buying and selling, something of the unselfish quality of those sacred human relationships that are untouched and uncontaminated by money. This store never wants to be guilty of such bad taste as to claim perfection, but it makes no secret of its ambition to foster and deserve at all times the confidence of its customers.

There is no higher success than
TO BE BELIEVED IN!
